Key Worker Model

Making decisions with you

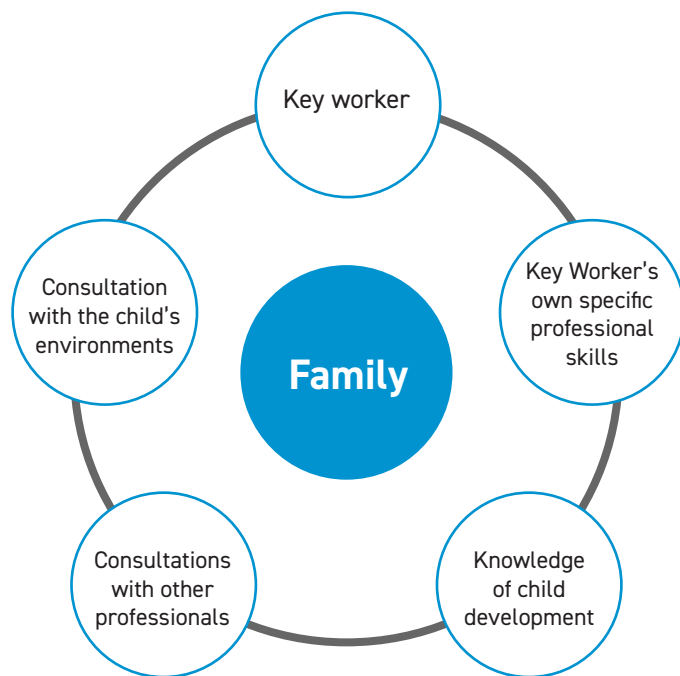

Your family is the most important people in your child's life.

You have the greatest influence on making changes in your child's development.

You are the "Expert" on your child.

Your family will be involved in all the decisions about what you want to achieve for your child and how you want to achieve it.

During visits, you and your Key Worker will work together to support your child and practice things together.

Working with you

Each family has a main contact person called a Key Worker.

Your Key Worker is a part of a transdisciplinary team and may be an educator, a physiotherapist, a speech pathologist or an occupational therapist. You will work with your Key Worker on the goals you set as a family.

A Key Worker has specialist knowledge of child development and has experience in working with young children with developmental delays and disabilities.

With support from other team members, your Key Worker works in partnership with you and other caregivers.

They will provide advice, education and therapy to promote your child's learning, development and participation in everyday activities.

When needed, your Key Worker can organise for another team member to be involved.

They may support you and your Key Worker in a number of ways, including joint visits to share information or for assessment.

Meeting with your Key Worker

Children learn best in the places where they spend most of their time.

The best way for a child to learn is through play and everyday activities.

A Key Worker will support you and your child in all the different places they go. This includes:

- the family home
- preschool
- school
- child care
- community based activities, eg
 - shopping centres
 - sporting activities
 - play groups
